Charles "Sam" Faddis

National Security Challenges – Cleaning Up After Barack – Fighting the Deep State

Charles S. (Sam) Faddis, is a former CIA operations officer with thirty years experience in the conduct of intelligence operations in the Middle East, South Asia and Europe. His last assignment prior to retirement in May of 2008 was as head of the CIA's terrorist Weapons of Mass Destruction unit. He took the first CIA team into Iraq in the Summer of 2002 in advance of the invasion of that country and has worked extensively in the field with law enforcement, local security forces and special operations teams.

Since retirement, he has written extensively, provided training to a wide variety of government and private entities and appears regularly on radio and television. Sam has been involved in national security matters at the highest levels of the U.S. government. He is the author of "Beyond Repair: the Decline and Fall of the CIA" and "Willful Neglect: The Dangerous Illusion of Homeland Security".

Sam will take stock of damage done under Obama, talk about the way ahead with emphasis on China, Russia and Iran, and highlight the role of the Deep State in hindering our efforts.

He asked me to tell you that no question is "off-limits".
