About Our Speaker, Mr. Nan Su

“China is the largest factory in the world.” “China will soon become the No.1 GDP nation.” “Can we just be China one day?”

To many Americans, especially those who have never been to China, made just a few stops or spent very little time there, China has impressed them with many rosy pictures. As a result of these pictures, China model has become a popular topic in the last decade.

However, in the last few years, China’s GDP growth has slowed down to well below 8%, a target figure which was set by Beijing’s leaders in order to keep the stability of the country, as well as keep the current regime in power.

Is the China Model sustainable? What would the world expect to see within the next decade from this rising economic power? With the present state of the world, understanding the true China has never been more important.

While Mr. Su’s talk reveals the secrets of China’s economic growth, he also touches upon a much more profound topic, that being the cultural change imposed by the regime for the past sixty years and its ripple effects on social, environmental, political and economic aspects of our lives in America.
